

Erin Ford-Horio

Erin began her career with the City of Clovis Animal Services Division in 2008, initially serving as an administrative assistant for general operations. She developed meaningful and long-lasting connections with adopters, donors and volunteers and was placed in charge of operations and transition for the City's then-under-construction adoption center. She served as supervisor for the Miss Winkles Pet Adoption Center from 2012 until 2022, when she shifted focus and decided to tackle a new challenge. She now leads operations for the field and animal intake teams for the Clovis Animal Services Division.

Outside of the office, she is a mom of two children, housemate to three cats, and wife to a husband with immense patience and endless support. She looks forward to developing additional programs and connections that will help to better serve her community of pets and their people.
