

Alex Aldana

Alexander has a Bachelor of Science degree in Biology from Stanislaus State University. He has been in the animal care world for over ten years, with extensive experience working in nonprofit and municipal shelters, as well as animal law enforcement. After starting at a dog daycare, Alex entered the sheltering world. He has worked at the Sacramento SPCA as an Animal Care Technician and Animal Care Supervisor. From there, he moved to the Front Street Animal Shelter, where he worked as an Animal Care Technician, focusing primarily on behavior. He then joined the city's animal enforcement team as an Animal Control Officer. During the pandemic, Alex relocated to Utah and worked as a supervisor at the Humane Society of Utah and as an Animal Control Officer. In 2022, Alex returned to the Front Street Animal Shelter as a Senior Animal Services Officer. Alex currently oversees cruelty investigations, bite complaints and dangerous animal declarations. He takes pride in being out in the field with his fellow officers and interacting with the public. Alex enjoys finding ways to assist both housed and un-housed animal owners with resources ranging from food to vet care.

He aims to further his education and pursue leadership opportunities in animal welfare. In his free time, he enjoys going to the beach, listening to music, and relaxing with his wife, three cats, and Labrador.
